A group of approximately 15 women and children are posed outdoors in a rural setting. The women are dressed in traditional Indian attire, specifically red blouses and white sarees with a gold border. They are holding a large, rectangular banner with a blue background and white text. In the center of the group, several young children are visible, some looking towards the camera. The background features a large, leafy tree on the left, a thatched-roof structure on the right, and a dirt ground. The overall scene suggests a community or educational event in a rural area.
